FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

Climate Care Festival opens it's 3rd edition

Between September 21-30th, the Festival offers a public programme that includes workshops, readings, talks, performances, videos and installations by local and international artists, thinkers, scientists, activists and designers, exploring the intersection between hybridity and modes of eco-governance.

Curatorial theme 2023 - CRITTERKRATIA

Critter - (plural critters) (usually endearing) A creature, an animal.

Kratia - Derived from κράτος (krátos, "strength, power") + -ῖα (-íā, noun-forming suffix).

..."On what basis do we elect where to invest our allegiance? If I were forced, I would choose Maple Nation. If citizenship is a matter of shared beliefs, then I believe in the democracy of species. If citizenship means an oath of loyalty to a leader, then I choose the leader of the trees. If good citizens agree to uphold the laws of the nation, then I choose natural law, the law of reciprocity, of regeneration, of mutual flourishing."...

Robin Wall Kimmermer, Braiding Sweetgrass

Following Robin Wall Kimmermer and other writers who call for The Democracy Of Species, we take the time and space of the Climate Care festival to imagine together with the public what that democracy might look like on the site of Floating University Berlin. This edition emerged as a program in search of thinking, language and models which could point Floating e.V towards more-than-human eco-organising and find ways to foster agreements between the basin, the association and the public which put life in the center. This search very actively aims to include the basin, the reeds, the frogs and all life forms within and of the basin, in the decision making processes of the association and its collaborators.

The question at the heart of this program is how can Floating e.V and Climate Care festival learn from hybridity and other natural phenomena, towards community organising and cultural programs? Can we see patterns in nature that inform how to organise our society in similar ways? Can these nature-inspired modes of organising promote a more livable future? This edition of Climate Care draws from this detailed research and continues to reimagine the relationship between the rainwater retention basin and Floating e.V. - its steward.

Past editions of Climate Care Festival

In 2019, Climate Care festival's first edition explored the complex interplay between ecology, pedagogies and ethics of care and sought to address climate breakdown through a curriculum for urban practice.

The second edition, in 2021, critically explored the notion of rewilding as an alternative to the city's plans to "renaturalize" the basin. The program questioned both the biological and ethical implications of this intervention at micro and macro levels.

Floating University Berlin

Floating University is a nature-culture learning site. Floating e.V. is a nonprofit organisation that keeps open, maintains, and takes care of this unique site – the rainwater retention pool at the former Berlin-Tempelhof airport – while bringing non-disciplinary, radical, and collaborative programmes to the public. In other words, it is a place to learn to engage, to embrace the complexity and navigate the entanglements of the world, to imagine and create different forms of living.
